and entertainment industry and brings together industry professionals and companies from across the UK.

What They Said

“This is an honour I did not expect in my lifetime. It is for me and all those Asian women and men who now shine in the media today. Many are friends and mentees. I know how hard it is- how much Asian and black talent has to strive to get noticed, get the breaks, to get where they want and deserve to be. This is a celebration of all that. There is still a long way to go.”

Writer and journalist Yasmin Alibhai-Brown was presented with the 2017 Outstanding Contribution to Media Award

“It is a huge honour and it is a wonderful honour coming from within the community in that there is recognition there. One always wonders whether the community thinks you as good as you think you are.”

Art Malik on being presented the 2016 Sophiya Haque Services to British Television and Film Award

“It is brilliant it is a real honour. And I really hope that young people of all backgrounds realise that you will be recognised for your hard work even when things are difficult and that is the real special thing about tonight.”

Fatima Manji on being named 2016 Media Personality of the Year

“The truth is there aren’t enough of us around. Lenny Henry, David Harewood and a lot of the others have been banging the table for the last year and trying to get people to notice what is going on. A lot of us feel that in many ways things are going a bit backwards in terms of representation. And things are not as progressive as they felt 25 years ago when I was getting into the industry.”

Krishnan Guru-Murthy, Media Personality of the Year 2014

“When I was growing up, watching Zainab Bedawi on the news was mesmerising. These days there are more of us around, but there’s still much more diversity needed behind the scenes and in senior editorial roles.

“I hope I can encourage younger people to come into the fascinating and powerful world of journalism.”

Ranvir Singh Journalist and presenter, Media Personality of the Year 2015

“It’s a real honour for me be nominated for a Sky programme. To have won an award is a big thing. It’s not just me. My team played a big part. We all wanted to find out what was going on. What we found will stay with me for the rest of my life.”

Ross Kemp Extreme World: India Best Investigation Award winner 2014

“I’m humbled, as I said, when I accepted the award to look out at a sea of faces, some of whom are so talented, many of whom are so experienced and with so much success that to be given an award in their presence, by some of them as judges is so humbling.”

Mehdi Hasan, Journalist and writer, Media Personality of the Year 2013
